Regional Assistance for Laid-off Aerospace Workers and Their Families

In 2017 Workforce Snohomish and Sea-King Workforce Development Council received federal and state funding to provide targeted services to workers impacted by the Boeing layoffs and their families. Those impacted range from direct Boeing employees, on-site contract and supply chain workers.

The services are designed to steer laid-off workers into gainful employment. There is never any charge for services provided through the WorkSource Centers.

Two Former Boeing Employees Help Others Transition Into Life After Lay-Off

Because it helps if you have been there

Recently laid-off Boeing employees, Larry Lupescu and Gary Stone, have found their calling as Peer Workers helping other dislocated aerospace employees figure out their next steps. By providing connections to specialized resources, Lupescu and Stone help put laid-off workers back on the path to gainful employment.

Lupescu and Stone understand the difficulties and emotions that come with being laid-off. Now they travel around the Puget Sound region on behalf of the WRC to assist their peers in discovering the exciting opportunities that lay ahead.
